I have no problem when new people come in and are confused. There's reason to actually be kind to them and help them out. Then there's Viking. There's a certain point you have to reach where you just let the idiot figure things out on his own. If he doesn't, then we'll always be his crutch, and we'll have to continue to support his idiocy. You know... much like welfare (oops, politics!).
