Dreganius wrote on Sat, 12 January 2008 03:26 I have to disagree with 1 part: "VOLUNTEERED"

They did so because they're pumped with fear and violence every day, because they are poor and looking for a quick fix, so to speak, and because they have propaganda thrown in their faces from the military.

Now, I expect a good page of flaming to ensue, so I'm probably not even going to bother looking at this thread again.

The other day I was talking to somebody in the armed forces. I asked him "Do you support the war?" and he responded "I support whatever my country wants me to do." Basing an assumption on what he said, yes, they DID volunteer.

[quote title=Dover wrote on Sat, 12 January 2008 00:39]Funny how he justifies the cold war part. "Oh, that was against communism. It doesn't count. The blame goes to the soviets". Horse shit. Also, he forgot the war of 1812. And all those "wars" with Native Americans (Oh, people hate to bring up Native Americans in threads like this--it tends to knock the US down a notch). In fact, he forgot all of these.

What country are you from Dover? It says you are from the U.S., but by the way you talk about it, it doesn't seem like you are.
