

---

Subject: Re: US bashing (I strike back)

Posted by Dover on Tue, 15 Jan 2008 00:13:05 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

R315r4z0r wrote on Mon, 14 January 2008 12:00I don't recall Vietnam or Korea having anything to do with the Cold War...

Lol.

R315r4z0r wrote on Mon, 14 January 2008 12:00And because, the US isn't apart of Eurasia. We don't have any large super-power countries bordering us, we are surrounded by water. There would be absolutely no reason for us to pack up a nuclear missile and travel halfway across the globe to fire it and start a war.

Mostly because we wouldn't need to. Like in my above post, the US has had bombers capable of delivering nukes (This means "bombing the shit out of", not delivering in the FedEx sense) from the West Coast to Moscow since the mid-late 1970s. That's the same thing as setting up nukes within launching range, only with the mode of delivery being the difference.

R315r4z0r wrote on Mon, 14 January 2008 12:00However, when a known non-ally starts massing WMD out side of our country, of course we are going to act.

Why the hell would they start massing missiles THAT far away from home and THAT close to American soil? I mean, without any intention for using them. Or at least using them to threaten the country.

So, it's okay for the US to deliver military equipment to Afghanistan "THAT far away from home" to help out "Allies" but the Soviets can't deliver military equipment to Cuba (One of THEIR allies)? American hypocricy speaks again.

---