

---

Subject: Re: Should the community have a "say"?

Posted by EvilWhiteDragon on Sat, 26 Jan 2008 12:18:03 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

I voted yes, simply for the reason that the only reason that I stay active on these forums is that I love renegade, and that sometimes something useful is posted.

I do however hate the complete lack of moderation here, you, Crimson, know that however, and you told me once that you thought that the community wanted it this way.

Well, as I had no way of making sure you were right or wrong, I trusted you here. Though recently I start to hear more and more complaints about the moderation.

Please use this information to your advantage, and try to make the forum a better place for everyone. This would be in the benefit of us all, and mostly in the benefit of Renegade, and that is what we're all here for, right?

I suggest to ban certain people, lock certain topics, remove certain posts rants, and so on.

If you think you can't handle that, as I know you're very busy, I would like to try to manage that.

No, I am not saying that I should do this, just if you can't find anyone else, then I am willing to give it a try, to the benefits of us all.

Edit:

Could the one that voted no elaborate? Or does he/she want to remain anonymous? That [b]seems[/s] a bit cowardish, in my opinion.

---