Indeed not, and this thread is a good example.

So? If a company hires white people when there are MORE QUALIFIED black people, they'll suffer. And if you don't like the fact a company doesn't hire enough black people for your tastes, take your business somewhere else. No need for government intervention.

That's a little insane.

Blazer wrote on Sun, 27 January 2008 03:00It's as simple as that. It's not "racism", it's following the law.
Yes, it is racism. Following a bullshit law does not stop it being racism.

Blazer wrote on Sun, 27 January 2008 03:00A law that was put in place, in an attempt to stop racism!
A feeble attempt which has failed at every turn and vastly increased tensions in society.

Blazer wrote on Sun, 27 January 2008 03:00I would think if you were going to be angry about something, it should not be the company that is trying to follow the law, you should be angry about the law itself
Yes.
