You guys do know how interdependent the economies of Canada, and America are, right? I know I'm disagreeing with a libertarian here, so there won't be much agreement, but both our countries' powers are the ticket to weathering the economic storm, and establishing future prosperity on both sides of the border.

Therefore, since McCain is the most pro-NAFTA player on the Republican side, he is easily my choice.

Everyone has their own interests at stake Plus, Canada, and America see eye to eye on more things than many would think. If it's anyone who enjoys telling American's what should be best for their country, it's Europeans.
