

---

Subject: Re: Presidents

Posted by nikki6ixx on Wed, 30 Jan 2008 23:31:01 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Well, I'm stoked about Guiliani giving his backing to McCain. I watched their speech just a moment ago, and I can say that I'm looking forward to the two of them putting the screws to Huckabee, and to the "social-conservatives" in general. After all, McCain was often regarded as the conservatives' nightmare... and Guiliani was their worst nightmare.

Already, polls have come out saying that McCain actually enjoys a decent lead above both Hilary and Obama in terms of 'electability', and I think that's due to his being able to straddle political boundaries in that he is moderate, and well like by many Democrats, and Republicans.

Pundits are mixed about whether it'll be a McCain-Guiliani ticket, and although I have a feeling it won't perpetuate, this campaign has shown that anything can happen; that'd be one awesome team for the White House.

---