Everyone cares because the case has been in the media spotlight since 2005. You keep a story in the media for long enough and soon it will be ingrained into society's collective memory.

When people think of ship sinking, the first ship that comes to mind in the Titanic. There a reason for that; the Titanic story has nver completely faded from the media spotlight and hence, it will be harder for society to forget it.

The same is the case with Holloway's case. When media coverage stops, nobody would give a flying fuck.
