
Subject: Re: Teh Intarweb is under attack!
Posted by Dover on Mon, 11 Feb 2008 02:48:43 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

cheesesoda wrote on Sat, 09 February 2008 14:23Dover wrote on Sat, 09 February 2008
01:26cheesesoda wrote on Thu, 07 February 2008 18:54Blazer wrote on Thu, 07 February 2008
11:43It all makes sense now...

<http://www.presstv.ir/detail.aspx?id=37468§ionid=351020103>

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Iranian_Oil_Bourse

Iran is opening a new oil market, where the US dollar is not allowed. This would greatly devalue the dollar and the US economy. The cutting of these cables just happens to have stopped the market from opening...how handy. Yep...Iran is off the air:
<http://www.internettrafficreport.com/history/267.htm>
If that's true, then yes...

What? How DARE a foreign country choose not to accept a failing currency in their market which they hold complete sovereignty over?! Next thing you know, they'll start thinking they can make decisions for themselves, or something.

Oh, wait...

If it would cripple our economy, then I see no problem in protecting our country. I don't want my country to fail because of some other country's actions. I'm not saying we should invade or anything some neo-con would support, but the world isn't some wonderful market where everybody gets along. It's survival of the fittest, and if cutting some lines helps to ensure our economy won't die quite as quickly and there's no bloodshed, I'm all for it.

If your economy would be "crippled" by what someone else does with a new oil market that isn't even open yet, then I'd say your economy isn't worth getting all uppity about.

Really. If you're THAT dependant on someone and you piss them off, it's nobody's fault but your own.
