I thought someone already worked out what caused the bug? IIRC it was something to do with a version number from Vista being a longer format than the ones from XP and overflowing the space Renegade allocated for it, but I could be wrong.

Anyway, I don't really see how setting a compatibility mode is that hard.

And FYI, you don't need admin mode to run Renegade, only XP SP2 mode. Without admin mode it will still run but can't save XWIS autologin data.
