I build and repair computers a lot and I've had no problem with the Asus boards so far. That system seems like a decent system. Normally I opt out for the Athlon XP over the Pentium 4 due to the fact you can save a lot of cash. However with the XP 3000 and XP 3200 it's not worth it as it isn't performing as well as the P4 and the price difference is very little when you come to the new new 64 bit athlon will offer some great new performance and features.
