

---

Subject: Re: F*ck you Harry Potter bashers...
Posted by R315r4z0r on Fri, 22 Feb 2008 06:53:47 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Starbuzz wrote on Fri, 22 February 2008 00:34I do agree that parents have the right to tell their kids what to do and shit afterall I was living under their roof and eating from their money and sleeping in the bed they provided.

I disagree. You received that book on your own as a gift with no ties to your parents at all. You read it at night while they where asleep in the room that they gave to you.

- They didn't pay for the book or endorse it in anyway. It was a gift.
- They where asleep while you read it, so you weren't reading on their time.
- You read in your room that they gave to you, so you weren't invading in their space.

There is no connection between them providing for you and that book and how you used your time to read it. They did not have any real right to take it away. All of the reasons you said (living under their roof and eating from their money and sleeping in the bed they provided), have nothing to do with that book. If any of those where taken away, it still wouldn't effect your ability to possess and read the book.

I can understand that your parent's beliefs are what they are, but there is a limit.

---