The men and women performing suicide bombings in places like Iraq, and Palestine are doing them because:

a) Their life totally sucks. The children have absolutely nothing to aspire to, to be more than they are. It's a sense of hopelessness.

b) The families raise their children to become martyrs, because there is no opportunity for their children. It's also an offshoot of the lack of birth control in those areas.

c) The Muslims in the Middle East have been treated like shit by the Western Powers at the BEST of times. When we're not blowing up one of their states, we're being condescending towards them. They have begun to view the West as invaders, and they rightly should, because we are. The West have been the ones to create countries like Iraq, and Lebanon for colonial purposes, totally ignoring the ethnic makeup of those regions.

Therefore, they view their region, religion, and race as being threatened. When someone's back is up against the wall, against an enemy that is superior militarily and economically, they'll fight dirty, simply because it's for survival; and you get the suicide bombings. They know the mothers are going to keep pushing out new ones. But they still want some form of justification, ANY small form... and perverted religious fanatics give them that small justification.

When there's no hope, you'll want to hear anything, just anything; and radical preachers prey upon that.

Their religion doesn't have loopholes. For every violent phrase, there are about several that preach peace, and tolerance. The Bible is no different, and neither is the Torah. If they were all Catholics out there, they'd still be blowing themselves up, because there is an ENTIRE section in the Bible that could be interpreted as God saying it's OK to kill Jews, because they killed his son.

Edit: Four things.

1) Quote:Editor Note:

The question / answer session is a satirical and fictional account based on Quranic verses and statements of Muslims who unfortunately take some hateful teachings of the Quran literally. Some readers have been mistaking it as a genuine conversation.

2) It's essentially porn. Holy books are fucking steamy, and make a Harlequin look like Dr. Seuss. I find it pretty freakin' hilarious that a bunch of Islamic horn-dogs are actually going to demonstrations and saying they should carry off with sweet, white, Western 'booty' . I can't stop laughing!!!

3) The gaming kiddie thing was a joke. But I'm still more afraid of gaming kiddies than I am of Muslims. Fewer things are scarier than some tiny Korean yelling at you, (and drenching you with saliva) about why PS3 is better than any other system in the world.

4) I'm the one here who should be scared of this sort of stuff. I used to date an Iraqi girl from a Business Class. She was a sweetie. And I've still yet to be murdered in some honour killing.
