He just served your ass on a platter and that's all you can come up with.

Wow.

Go Starbuzz.

Well, actually, his argument is terrible, and doesn't even refer to any real evidence whatsoever. But I figured that maybe he'll find out for himself that he's very, very wrong on so many levels.

Of course, my argument was so terrible you just quoted one small sentence and replied with a "Um... Ok..."

It's not my fault if I tell you something that you have made up your mind to not accept. I feel no need to make things up nor do I have any hidden agenda to further.

Simply saying "no real evidence" is irrational. I speak what I have learned through reading history and what I have seen and experienced.

On the other hand, your irrational support of Islam based on faulty logic and emotions concerns me the most.

nikki6ixx wrote on Fri, 04 April 2008 12:20 The Western powers have a LOT to do with the animosity of the Middle Eastern peoples, be it through direct military intervention, or more covert operations, like the CIA-engineered toppling of Mohammad Mossaddeq who was democratically elected in parliament. There are plenty of other examples.

I already referred to these incidents and specifically gave the blame to Western powers when I said this:

Quote: SO IN NO WAY IS THE WEST responsible for current Middle East problems (but definitely for poor management of the problem).

Please note highlighted words.

And once again, you ignore Islamic history.

nikki6ixx wrote on Fri, 04 April 2008 12:20 And the Muslim's don't have a history of violence. The Islamic empires' history is much less violent than that of other empires like that of the Roman Empire, or British Empire.

In fact, I'd have to say that there was no other empire that was as tolerant, and accepting of other religions, and peoples. The empire brought prosperity to the Middle East, Africa, and Spain. It was also home to massive libraries and literary depositories that are actually responsible for saving much of the Greek, and Roman philosophy we know of today.

Are you kidding me? Please...either you stay neutral and give an unbiased opinion based on credible history but please don't push any of your exceedingly irrational agenda.

If the Islamic empires you refer to were so intellectual and forward-thinking as you claim, why is the Middle East nations a symbol of backwardness today?

Every Western empire left behind a legacy you can see with your eyes today and at work. What is Islam's legacy? 1 violent book and 2 rocks of which 1 of them is the curse of the world. Go figure.
