random question i'll throw out there, is it better to have no cnc games coming out at all? it's cool that they're continuing where westwood sort of left off, but their reason for it is solely money, what else would it be my question is can they meet their economic needs while still making a game that we will want to play and find fun? can they produce a halfway decent game? i try to be optimistic but to me it seems like they're using cnc as a prostitute in an attempt to make money they put titans in kane's wrath, at least that made me happy
