Section 1:

Guess what? READ and the answer shall show itself to you.

Section 2:

This is opinion...I would say it slower but you just wouldn't read it again.

"saying "stealing games < making games you don't like" is like saying $2+2=4$, it's not even debatable..."

See Section 2.

"failure to refute the rest of my arguments"

See Section 1.

Even still, "stealing games < making games you don't like" is just your twist on it. I could do that same:

Rising up against a company that makes shitty products and wants to take over the whole industry
> Making a shitty product and trying to take over the entire industry.

Wow, same actions but a different spin...amazing how that works.

Buying EA's games for years and deciding to do something about the lack of quality > Buying whatever pile of crap they put out without question.

Nice...that spin worked too...lets try another...

Lifelong franchise flushed to hell by a company < People doing something about it.

That one was nice, flipped the sign and everything.

Company that won't modernize and doesn't listen to the fan base < anything on the face of the earth.

Ok well that last one should of really just been "= EA Games".
