

---

Subject: Re: RIP charleston heston

Posted by cheesesoda on Sat, 26 Apr 2008 14:22:45 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Wow, a perfect example of the ignorance that a feel good law provides...

Weapons are a worldwide market. Hell, if it's been possible to purchase nuclear submarines over the black market, I don't see there being a problem of purchasing guns. That would seem quite feasible. Not to mention that guns purchased on the black market aren't registered to the criminal, so that's another benefit for them to buy off of the black market, anyway.

Oh, and I'd still rather have a gun versus a knife, any day. Are you going to tell me that we should limit the sale of knives, too?

Edit: You know your house better than an intruder, right? I don't see it being too hard to take advantage of your knowledge of your surroundings to overcome an intruder and get the first shot off. It's always been a smart tactic to use your knowledge of your environment as an advantage over your foreign attacker.

---