It has to do with color's burning on your Retina and negative colors. For example, if you watch too long in the song, then look away, you will still see some spots while looking at other things. It's mostly a combination of different colors, as it is actually white, white through a prism --> all colors, that's how a Rainbow works too, where the rain is the prism to separate the white sun light in all colors.

When you watch really long at a square which is separated in the middle; White on top and black on bottom. When watching directly towards it for a while, then look somewhere else, you will still see the box, but the colors are inverted (Black on top and White below it)
