I may be Christian, but I have to agree with cheesesda's analogy here.

I add a caveat, however: It could very well be that it is a genuine Rolex, and you just passed up a good thing simply by not believing the word of a stranger on the street.

Whether or not a unified belief in a "God" (note that I do not single out one religion here as most religions of the world, for the most part, have the same "how to live a good life" message) is the solution to the problem, however, is another issue.
