If you've had Windows 98 installed for a long time, I found that it deteriorates over use due to more programs installed and poor disk management. Re-installing Windows 98 might help as the

with a 1Ghz Athlon, 256MB DDR266 and FPS is still rather poor, especially on the net where more processing power is required. If you ever get any money, I would spend it on another 128MB stick (which is really cheap now) or a better graphics card (Geforce 4MX/Radeon 7500 or below to keep the price down). If you could get either, Windows 2000 or Windows XP, then that would be better as it's built on a more efficient and stable system.
