

---

Subject: BF42 mapping? You could be a winner, read insert.

Posted by maj.boredom on Thu, 24 Jul 2003 03:58:41 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Sir PhoenixxLast time I checked, AircraftKiller wasn't an Admin of these forums. And how exactly is saying that this game isn't limited, if you know what you're doing unprofessional?

I've known AircraftKiller is not an Admin since before the new Forums were created and the first half of his statement is insightful. The second half is typical, but really has nothing to do with my point.

My use of the word bias is correct. Bias: A preference or an inclination, especially one that inhibits impartial judgment.

KIRBY098ACK is NOT saying anything except the intellect of the individual modding the game, is it's only limiting factor.

I'm not questioning his skill set or even anyones opinion on CaptKurt in this case.

JavaxcxLet me see if I can understand what you're saying... You want a moderator or admin to be a mindless unopinionated robot... right. That makes a world of sense.

Ah... look again my worthy adversary. I said public displays. I, as many of you, believe everyone is entitled to his/her opinion and I believe that Crimson's opinion is worth respecting, as well as many of your opinions are. The only thing I questioned here is the public display. Do Umpires let the public know who their favorite Baseball team is? Does the moderator in a debate say whom they want to win? Of course not, but they have an opinion and in most cases they at least put on the guise of being impartial. The public wouldn't trust them in their position that calls for impartiality if they publicly display their partiality.

I do realize this is not a place of business and being an Admin or Moderator here is not a profession; And my thinking that it should be run like that is just an opinion.

---