There are lots of users here who make entire posts out of "lol" and never get bitched at for it- even people who've been here since before the forums changed hands. A little consistency here, please?

sadukar... "newfag?" You ain't been around near long enough to start throwing words like that around. You also can't possibly have 2476 posts in one year and a few months without having crapped out more than your fair share of pointless one-liners.

And will all of you nitwits please, for the love of all things holy, stop quoting large images?! It's funny the first time... but when four posts in a row have the same damn image in them it gets bloody annoying.
While I agree, there are just some things everybody should be reasonable enough to know to not post... whether it be quoting images, posting way too much, or being an insufferable cock to others when they're no better themselves.

That, and "Help sum guy said he could hack internet."
