What you see is the propaganda machine for Nod on television. It isn't a live feed, and it's doctored up, so Kane looks "presentable" to the public.

Reality is that he WAS in the temple, and got horribly burned by the beacon at the end of the first game.

He was patched up, and returned. No alien abduction subplot is anywhere in there, and I think Infinit is smoking crack.

No one knows what Kane saw for the Tiberian future. It is never adressed.

The most perplexing aspect of the end of Firestorm is the room with kane clones and Cabal intermingling. you can go in a thousand different storylines there. And why would a clone need a metal plate in his head anyways???

Remember, the tacitus was in pieces originally. Maybee the mutants are carrying part of it.
