Subject: Re: Learning PHP
Posted by genetix on Sun, 03 Aug 2008 20:00:58 GMT

Honestly I taught myself PHP because I wanted to use it. I wanted to build a virtual pet site. I did to. It took me way longer then it should have but I did make one. The code wasn't near strong enough so the site never went anyway and ended up folding over but I learnt a lot. Dam I was just thinking it was 5 years ago but it must be getting closer to 8 now. I was only 10 or 11 when I started that stuff.

Start working with databases. Thats my favourite part about PHP. It lets you create stuff that's truly dynamic. Anyone can make php spit out HTML. Whats the fun in that? Make PHP do some work!