

---

Subject: Re: Learning PHP

Posted by cmatt42 on Mon, 04 Aug 2008 05:52:25 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

I was interested in PHP, and bought a self-teaching book on it. It turns out that my practicing things such as HTML and mIRC scripting many years back helped me understand a lot of the concepts fairly quickly. But still, I have other things to grasp, like object orientation (apparently PHP isn't so great with it, but I don't particularly care), and working with databases.

But yes, check out sites like the previously mentioned Hawkee, download some PHP scripts, put 'em up on your server, play around with them, change some things to see how it works, then learn from that and move on to the next thing.

---