

---

Subject: Re: Learning PHP

Posted by StealthEye on Mon, 04 Aug 2008 11:34:42 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

I got nearly all of my PHP experience out of modifying/supporting a news script (<http://cutephp.com/>).

light is basically correct though, apart from the read bad code -> write bad code thing. You might start with writing bad code, but you will soon start wondering why the original author did some things in a weird way. If it looks stupid, try to rewrite it and improve it. If it doesn't work as expected, then you have learned why the other coder had done it weirdly. If it does work, then you can be proud of having written better code than the original author.

---