

---

Subject: Re: Tech Degree

Posted by StealthEye on Fri, 08 Aug 2008 22:19:02 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Go do something you like. Even if you do earn a lot, the thing you won't be able to buy is a job you like, and that sounds like a rather important thing to me. Also, if you don't like what you do, I doubt you'll get that good at it, and you probably won't get that much money either, or have trouble finding a decent job.

You should really inform about the university and courses you will take. If you think it is interesting and think you are willing to learn more about it, then go for it.

If you want good advice on this though, ask someone who knows you well and got a BSc, MSc or such. They will be able to give you much better advice than we can.

---