Obama: Hasn't read the Constitution and is not willing to read it and enforce it. Believes that the office of the president has the power to "do" things.

(bullshit? Read the Constitution; the president ENFORCES the laws, he does not create them. Congress creates the laws, and the powers congress has {which it oversteps greatly, daily} are enumerated in Articles I through VII)

Obama talks about "change" because it's this years buzzword, but he just wants to give dollars to people, dollars that the Federal Reserve prints from thin air. So the $1000 he gives you will be more like $800 today, or worse. He doesn't want to fix the MASSIVE corruption in our government. No, Obama is not for change. He just wants to give off the illusion of change.

And if you're an Obama supporter, please, read my McCain rant as well before assuming I am off my rocker.

McCain: This man is insane. Simply insane. I cite all the things I said about Obama as equally true about McCain, but on top of that, McCain wants to police the world (if Obama doesn't, I am still not sure where he lies on that). I am sorry, but until you, as a country, are NOT corrupt, and NOT interested in anything but justice, you cannot police the world, and even then, it simply isn't something that should be done.

Liberty and national sovereignty are important ideas. Policing the world removes both. Without those, we are no better than the people we are "bringing justice to". It's complete lunacy.

So who do you vote for? IMO, you must vote on principle, not based on "majority choice". Choosing between the lesser of two evils is what fools do. Write in your own name. Vote for Sitting Bull. Vote for whomever you believe will actually fix the country.

And not the problems FOX and CNN tell you about, but the real problems, like unsound currency, a horrible foreign policy, and the complete loss and violation of civil liberties and constitutional powers here at home. IMO, if you don't vote for these things, you are voting to continue the path we are on, and you, sir or madam, are a fool; a fool that will make everyone suffer for your choice.
