

---

Subject: The notorious photographs

Posted by Azrielstoneheart on Tue, 29 Jul 2003 16:33:56 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

From what I've seen, the U.S. isn't exactly flashing around the photos all over the place. And let me ask you this. What is the point of decency in this case? This isn't a P.R. campaign, and the Arab world already has a very negative view of the U.S. In fact, if the U.S. didn't prove their deaths, someone would probably commit acts in their names and claim they were still alive. To the Arab world, that would be seen as a victory over the capitalist demon giant of the west. Not only would that make things worse, but then more people would be willing to commit the same acts because they would see no retribution for their acts. An example has to be made to show that the world will not tolerate this kind of terrorism and blatant disregard for others. If not, then more and more of this sort of thing will occur. It's human nature.

---