
Subject: Re: Need help with Ubuntu & Wine
Posted by JPNOD on Sat, 23 Aug 2008 20:08:29 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Linux is actually pretty good. As a matter of fact I think that if you would have never touched Windows it's easier to learn Linux. Not to mention you need to maintain a Windows box alot more which is for the "normal people" that dont sit behind the box for more then 2 hours a day something very hard to do. Besides out of the box it has a good integrated firewall. When it comes to eye candy there is some distributions that could top Vista;

I am toying a around a bit with Debian, I heard alot of good things about it. And many tutorials on the web.

Oh and can't wait till the cooperation comes in a couple of companys are working on a realy good distribution.. I dunno where I read it. But when its grown up and it could actually match up with a 2003/2008 domain envoirement.
