

---

Subject: Re: Question about nVidia's CUDA.

Posted by saberhawk on Mon, 25 Aug 2008 09:31:21 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Ghostshaw wrote on Mon, 25 August 2008 03:03NVidia is indeed working on a low voltage x86 processor, its supposed to compete with the VIA CPU's and Intel atom processor. And well CUDA is all fun, but its only usefull for high FPU load stuff and more importantly stuff that can be done accross a shitload of threads. Most normal programs will not benefit from it.

Except games!

---