It will download a .mix archive with the map. Although it's possible to include custom sounds in a map it's not common practice. It's up to the map makers not to put annoying sounds in the maps. Then it's up to the server owners to not use bad maps (annoying sounds). And it's up to you to chose a server that choses maps you like and which does not have sounds.

So basically, at the moment it's technically possible to have custom sounds in a custom map, but I see no reason to be afraid of custom sounds becoming popular.
