Being against it has a very strong argument.

We're talking about mutilating a part of a male child's body. Yes, we have to entrust parents to make decisions for their kids, but that's a permanent act done that has no real benefits besides aesthetics (which, according to stats -- that actually make sense -- women prefer a cut penis. Whether or not that's rational is another thing).

Are parents wrong for doing it? I don't know. I don't think it matters all that much, but when it comes to changing the anatomy of someone, even a child, I think it's best left up to the person to decide for themselves as long as there is no significant medical reasons for doing it.
