Carelessness should not go unpunished. The team with the better offensive strategy should damn well be capable of obliterating their enemy. If I recall, in classic C&C, you couldn't just sit there with only a few defenses up and have units all spread out doing random shit. You had to think about almost every move you made. Including defense.

TL;DR: Why the fuck should you still be able to win when you made such a mistake as to lose every building but one? That's a HUGE mistake to make.
