

---

Subject: Re: The Truth About The People Behind The Forums

Posted by InternetThug on Wed, 01 Oct 2008 00:20:47 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Muad Dib15 wrote on Tue, 30 September 2008 19:12 Won't go into to much detail.

M/17 in a month/US

I run cross country for my school with a personal best time (since last Saturday 3 days ago) of 19:23 on the 3.1 mile (5K for you Euro types). I'm 6'3 and am the 4th or 5th tallest of all the juniors in my school. I like being tall as I can see over everyone.

I'm quiet and somewhat reserved. I don't have many friends, but the ones I do have I've known them since I moved to our house where we are now 5 miles away from the worst city in Wisconsin (murder/crimewise). It's very hard to get me angry, but you know it when I am, and God help you if you are the one I'm angry at. I'm a brownbelt in JKLee's Tae Kwon Do, but I haven't gone for about 4 or 5 months. So I've had a brown belt for almost a year. Another reason to fear me when I'm angry.

I just got my braces off today and my mouth feels very funny. I keep licking my teeth going "this feels weird, where are my braces?"

I'm very political savy imo and in College I plan to major in Engineering, and minor in Political Science, then become a Senator and help steer this country back to where it should be. ie: the passive giant that can kick almighty ass like in WW2, but be an aggressive player in the global market.

Okay, that was more than I thought I would type.

Last thing, I just got a job at PicknSave a couple weeks ago.

you gotta be hard to live in wisconsin, unless you live in the "ghettoes" of milwaukee, there isn't really any place you have to worry about crime all the time...there are occasionally crimes, but i still leave my house unlocked every night

---