Its not a parent's job to be their kid's friend. They are the kids caretakers and should correct the kids sufficently to what the kid was doing. If the kids did something bad, like bullying someone in the schoolyard younger than them, (this from kindergarten to about 3rd grade.) then they should be spanked. stuff like that won't be corrected by the parents telling the kid, "Don't do that because it hurts other people." Our grandparents grew up just fine with spanking. What's the big deal about it?

There are much better ways to discipline your children. Childhood is the only time in life where you have no responsibilities, why take away the enjoyment by making them scared of you? After all, they should be able to look up to you.
