My opinion on alcohol is besides the fact that I would never drink it, I can recognize the derogatory effects it has on people and the numerous deaths it causes in our country every year. Protecting other people is my reason for being against it. I know from America's previous experience that prohibiting alcohol would never work, but yeah.
I never rely on my personal convictions for public policy.

You can't protect people from themselves. It's a stupid idea. Alcohol is only dangerous if you abuse it, so to punish me or anybody else for being responsible in alcohol consumption because others may not be is an unjust law.

Home boy speaks truth.

I like alcohol, it's a spiritual thing I do with friends, I like getting drunk and having a laugh, I've never got aggressive or done stupid shit while drunk because I don't let it get to me, however.. other people let the alcohol control them which leads to stupid shit.

if you drink responsibly then you'll have a better time anyway.

also you should get drunk sometime u6795, If you don't get laid you'll have something to talk about the morning after assuming one of your friends pukes or does something silly.

ahh, lager, where would the world be without it?
