

---

Subject: Re: pawkyfox's Another Thread

Posted by cheesesoda on Mon, 27 Oct 2008 14:11:38 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Completely missed my point.

I'm not talking about given the chance to believe in Christ. I'm talking about actively believing in something else. Am I to believe that those billions (trillions?) of people that believed in something else are damned for eternity because they didn't or don't believe in the "correct" faith?

Yes, I know man sins. I know they do it themselves which only leads me to believe that God could just destroy Satan. Since the Bible teaches that Satan isn't infinite, he can only be in one place at a time. Thus, he cannot possibly be the source of man's temptation. If he isn't the source of human temptation, then it's human nature causing the sinning, and Satan is nothing more than an opponent of God's in a game for our souls. Otherwise, Satan would have been destroyed, already.

As for godlessness, that doesn't change the fact that "God" actively killed his Creation. If a woman has 5 kids, does she have the right to kill 3 of them as punishment and warning to the other two?