Goes to show how much everyone knows...

2012 is the end of the Mayan calendar, who up to this point in time, have never been wrong about celestial predictions and what not. It's sort of like how we can predict the weather, but better.

However, the fact is that their calendar just ends, it doesn't say or even hint that it means the end of the world. It's just the end of the calendar.

It is supposedly simply the end of their celestial cycle, and instead of the calendar ending, it is just rebooting.

The whole "End of the world in 2012" is just a rumor started by people who don't understand why their calendar has ended. There is no physical facts that say there is an armageddon prediction or anything similar.
