Up until recently, I would have said nvidia all the way because of all the ATI crap that we had to go through when building the scripts.dll but my next card may well be an ATI because A.All the ATI crap is stuff that only applied to graphics cards long dead and B.ATI has become a lot more open (they are releasing specs to many of their cards now which I applaud)

Plus the way nvidia is going lately (the whole thing with their GPUs being busted and them trying to hush it up, also there is the fact that they have tried to stifle discussion of problems with their GPUs in at least one forum)
