A theory I've been working/expanding on is the multiverse theory. Basically the timeline is spread over multiple universes, one for every decision that's been made. Developed along the lines of what Scyther posted, though all times are in sync with each other, none are travelling at different speeds. The theory is that while Time travel within your own timeline is impossible (for some good reasons I'll put in later if people are interested) you can jump from universe to universe back along its timeline. However, being able to get back to your own time is a different story (a'la the "Sliders" series)

Another good book about time travel is "Timeline" by Micheal Crichton(sp.)
