Don't confuse being bias with being offensively stereotypical.

And it doesn't matter if it is "just" a game. That's like writing a letter to a black guy insulting him, but you just say "It's just a letter, get over it."

What difference does it make what is making the offensive comment?

However, the point is, everyone has their own opinions. You can like the game all you want, I don't care. All I know is that I can't stand it.

Edit: Open mind? You don't understand. When I first played Generals, It was with the demo that came with a collectors edition of past C&C games. I was like "WTF am I playing?!" However, a few months later when I actually bought the game and played the full version, not only did I keep the same opinion of the game, my respect for it actually lowered because what I thought were settings that were fixed just because it was a demo were actually the same in the full version... a major disappointment.
