

---

Subject: Re: Inauguration Day 2009

Posted by u6795 on Wed, 21 Jan 2009 01:48:33 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

nikki6ixx wrote on Tue, 20 January 2009 20:42 I wish him good luck; it'll take monumental effort to work through the economic situation and the problems facing America today.

As for Obama being overblown, while it is true, it's not exactly his fault. It's because of the media portraying him as if he is some sort of messiah, and that worries me because if there's one thing the media are good at, it's building someone up, and then cynically tearing them down. You speak the complete truth, my Canadian friend. So many people fail to realize the expectations we've given him are simply unreal.

This country is in for a huge disappointment if he somehow fucks up. That's why I personally am terrified for Mr. Obama. The amount of media scrutiny on his life from this day forward is completely unfair, for anyone to deal with.

One thing I am very pleased about, however, is how smooth of a transition Mr. Bush has allowed it to be.. The two men seem to get along quite nicely, and I'm glad it all worked out nicely.

---