

---

Subject: Re: Need recovery cd

Posted by \_SSnipe\_ on Mon, 16 Mar 2009 01:30:46 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Yes i went to there drivers download website, but some drivers (lets say drivers for a wireless device) has more then one, and the laptop did not say which driver will work since it could only detect the hardware but since could not b find any drivers it did not work, so what i did is download every driver per device until i ran into a driver that worked =] and i did work every hard ware is working now only thong i found odd is i have the same pc (by that i have 2 laptops that are the exact same) one i put vista on another (the one the post is about) is xp, so im guessing vista helped since the other one that i pu vista on never asked for any drivers even tho it was wiped out and was a blank copy of vista no drivers while i put blank copy of xp on the second on the second one and has no drivers for the hardware, but as i said went to del website downloaded a driver per device and installed each one til one worked, but the odd part is if these laptops are te same then why does my vista laptop have broadcom wireless network adatper but when on the xp laptop i went to network drivers and only one that worked was the intel wireless driver its like wtf? tere both same but i guess vista replaced the drivers needed or something since some on vista wee not even on dell website

And no i did not steal them, this guy from africa (yes i know wierd uh?) is like a pc tech or net admin or something and he has literally bunch of giant barrels bigg as a car filled with hundreds to thousands of brand new routers and hard drives and net wroked cards all brand fucking new just tons of computers and laptop (which i worked of these two laptops) and cars full of keyboards and mouses and he sends them over sea's

I wish i knew how the fuck he has all this i mean he has flat screens and latops and acts like there trash in his garrage just pushes them over with his feet like an old mop or something,,,i opened a huge barral and saw it full of hard drives that can fill up my moms car all brand new while im trying to save up money to buy just one lol

---