That's not what I mean.

Rules are meant to protect the people of this forum. Not punish them.

Why restrict their use of something when it doesn't cause any problems or conflict? Even though it says in the rules to not allow it, it is saying it under the contents of protecting people on the forum from having to suffer from some form of conflict that derives out of it.

If no one is suffering from some form of conflict derived out of 'breaking the rule' then there really is no purpose or meaning behind enforcing it in that particular scenario.
