This really isn't competition for Wii. Wii has its own thing going on with its intuitive games that this OnLive thing can't mimic very easily.

If Nintendo goes back to making standard consoles, then that's when this OnLive will be competition for them. But then again, consoles do have their "Only for" games.. Like Mario & Zelda for Nintendo, Master Chief for Xbox, ect. I don't think those companies will simply give up their trademarks to a competing corporation.

My guess is that if anything happens, the other game companies will make something similar to this thing for their own games.
