Goobers wrote on Tue, 21 April 2009 14:28well tbh, my vote was anti cheat however to be more specific, more cheat detection with biatch warning would be better, if you waste time inputting an anti cheat system then someones gunna waste there time making cheats to get around your anti-cheat system, ingame moderators will never be extinct mainly for the fact that although 99% of ppl play fair do the right thing and have fun there's ppl out there who are just plain wankers that don't cheat and need moderators to crack down on, racism and personal abuse top the list for this kind of example, if there was a biatch warning saying someones using aimbot *cheat name removed*or other it would be more useful as a warning than an auto-banner, mods can gather player info and other details so that if serial ip and name were changed the moderator and admin staff for that server would have a proverbial paper trail to add to new offences cheers goobers

yes, but the problem would be, if there's no mod ingame then what?
