

---

Subject: Re: The swine flu

Posted by Canadacdn on Fri, 01 May 2009 06:20:50 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

reborn wrote on Thu, 30 April 2009 05:57 They're taking it seriously where I work...

My employer asked me yesterday to fill in a form that declared I have not been to Mexico in the last few weeks, and if I was planning on traveling there any time soon. It wasn't even him who wanted the info, he was passing it on to people who we are contracted to.

I'm sure it's illegal for them to pass that info on, data protection act and all that. Plus, is it even legal for them to be asking me private, personal questions like that about where I will be holidaying?

I think it's a liberty.

You live in the UK, privacy there hasn't existed for quite some time.

---