You still didn't get what I ment. I ment you do a step, then you test if everything works, etc. If you had done so, you'd have noticed that once you install scripts 3.x, the system starts crashing and not before that. The crashdump namely shows 3d8.dll to be the problem, that's a file that's added when you install scripts.

I'd recommend you to use version 2.9.2 of scripts, which doesn't come with 3d8.dll for the moment. I'm not 100 % sure where to download it, though. You can also decide to just install core patch 2, which comes with scripts 2.x and not install any newer version of scripts after that.
