Funny. I have an anecdote about this. I used to play soccer when I was younger, and it used to be before the age of, oh...seven, they would give you a trophy at the end of the season, no matter how shitty you did (I have some trophies from that time from when my team places last in our league). Yet, after a certain time the everyone-gets-a-trophy was replaced by medals, which only winners got. I have more trophies than I do medals, but the medals always meant more.

The point being, "At least I'm attempting" is fine for seven year olds, but after that it stops mattering as much.
